OVERVIEW

The purpose of the Education Practicum (ED2510) is to provide first or second year B.Ed. students with an experiential basis for future decisions and study relating to their choice of the teaching profession as a personal career. The most distinctive aspect of course arrangement involves assigning student teachers to a working teacher in a classroom setting. It requires the student teachers to develop the ability to conduct systematic inquiries into the nature of the teacher's role within the classroom, school and society. The key role of the teacher as instructor involves a very wide range of skills applied to a very wide range of interactions between teachers and students. Beyond the classroom door, the teacher is an integral part of the general administration of the school. As a member of a professional group the teacher also actively participates in the development and upholding of professional standards.

COURSE TEXTS

1. Beauchamp & Parsons Teaching from the Inside Out. (1988)
2. Taylor, G. D., & Runtz, R. (eds.) Thinking About Teaching. (1995)
3. Education Practicum: Orientation to Teaching: Student Manual. (1999-2000).

COURSE ORGANIZATION

There are two main parts to the course, each of which is intended to reinforce the other, in a type of feedback system.

1. Seminars

In these twice weekly classes all students in the course meet together for lessons and discussion on readings related to the nature of school teaching. A mini-lesson presentation will be a required exercise. It is intended that the seminar work will contribute to and benefit from the learning acquired during the classroom placement. A certain amount of seminar time will be used for orientation to the field experience, including protocols, activities and assignments. There will be a final exam.

2. Field Experience

The student will spend five (5) full days or ten (10) half days (totalling 30 hours) at an assigned school. The school placement component will involve the following activities:

- a. TEACHER-ASSISTANT ACTIVITIES - assisting the teacher upon request for aid in specific classroom administrative or tutorial situations,
- b. CLASSROOM JOURNALS AND REPORTS - two assignments aimed at practising structured observations and reflections on roles and responsibilities associated with teaching.

Students will complete a student teaches self-assessment form. Teachers will complete an Assessment of Student Development form in order to provide feed back to the student teacher about their potential as a teacher.
