NATURE AND PURPOSE OF THE COURSE:

Sociology 360 is an introduction to the study and analysis of social, economic, political, racial, ethnic, age, and gender inequality from a sociological perspective. Major theoretical approaches and empirical studies will be examined. The scope for this course will be comparative and international, but most of the descriptive materials will relate to Canadian society.

OBJECTIVES OF THE COURSE:

- A. To understand the consequences of inequality in Canadian society.
- B. To understand the major issues, debates, and controversies which frame the attempts to explain and measure the incidence of inequality.
- C. To understand the structural, cultural, and demographic characteristics of inequality.
- D. To understand the variety and variability of theoretical perspectives to explain inequality.
- E. To understand how power and domination relationships are related to and help to understand significant issues in our society.

EVALUATION METHODS:

There will be two examinations, quizzes, a presentation, and a research paper required in this class. Each is described below:

Examinations: The examinations will be a combination of "objective", short answer, and essay questions. However, the major weighting will be on essay questions. The final examination will cover materials from the entire course.

Quizzes: Quizzes will be primarily definitions and but some short answers will also be required.

Presentation: Subject to the size of the class, each person (or group) will be responsible for of one or more 25 minute presentation(s) of the work of major workers who have made major contributions to the study of social inequality. (Your evaluation will be dependent upon content of the presentation, demonstrated understanding of the material, and ability to relate the study to relevant theoretical and methodological issues, not the style of your presentation.)

Research Paper: A reserach paper is required in this course. You may write the paper on any topic that you and I agree on. You must submit a topical outline and tentative bibliography for your paper before 15 February. Failure to submit these materials will result in a mark of zero and probable failure for the course. You will receive a paper which will assist you in preparation and presentation of your research.
